

Camille Leigh

Camilla has worked for the past two decades in Europe and North America as a fundraiser for education, healthcare, non-profit, arts and culture and social service organizations. Camilla's expertise ranges from start-up fundraising program development for organizations newly fundraising, to helping assisting the growth of seasoned fundraising programs in established fundraising organizations. She has deep expertise in working with volunteer and organizational leadership to design and execute strategic fundraising programs including campaign design, planning and execution; strategic major gift fundraising; prospect research and identification; case for support writing and campaign communications; and donor stewardship and retention. Camilla brings an energy, enthusiasm and dynamism to fundraising that translates an organization's fundraising ambitions from the planning stage to success.

Camilla Leigh co-founded Mather Leigh in 2006. Prior to Mather Leigh, Camilla held a range of senior positions in education and non-profits that has enabled her to personally raise over $50m for a variety of causes. Most recently she served as a senior member of the development team at McGill University; Head of Development for the Saïd Business School at the University of Oxford; Senior Development Executive at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland; and Development Executive for UK-based non-profits EarthKind and the Disabled Living Foundation. Camilla has been a regular speaker and chair for conferences in her field. A native of the UK and now a resident of Canada, Camilla holds a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Surrey, England.
